

Fund our public hospitals

The Ontario government promised no cuts to health care during the recession. Now proposals for a funding freeze threaten to cut our hospitals – a cut that won't heal.

H1N1 is already increasing demand on our hospitals. Costs of drugs and diagnostic equipment are constantly rising. Every day our hospitals are being asked to do more with less.

Zero funding will create a care deficit for our patients. It will also undo efforts to reduce wait times, return health professionals into the system, and provide better access to services – efforts that have already cost billions of dollars. Turning the clock back wastes these investments.

Please do not fight the recession on the backs of our public hospitals. Our hospitals need to be funded based on our community's needs.

Name:

Address:

Signature:

To:

On the front of this postcard I have come up with a single word to describe my feeling towards hospital underfunding.

Fund our public hospitals

The Ontario government promised no cuts to health care during the recession. Now proposals for a funding freeze threaten to cut our hospitals – a cut that won't heal.

H1N1 is already increasing demand on our hospitals. Costs of drugs and diagnostic equipment are constantly rising. Every day our hospitals are being asked to do more with less.

Zero funding will create a care deficit for our patients. It will also undo efforts to reduce wait times, return health professionals into the system, and provide better access to services – efforts that have already cost billions of dollars. Turning the clock back wastes these investments.

Please do not fight the recession on the backs of our public hospitals. Our hospitals need to be funded based on our community's needs.

Name:

Address:

Signature:

To:

On the front of this postcard I have come up with a single word to describe my feeling towards hospital underfunding.