– Dalton McGuinty, September 2003

Dear Mr. McGuinty:

As you know, most unionized workers have a legal right to follow their work, with their collective agreement, if their jobs move to a new employer. But thanks to Mike Harris, Crown employees in Ontario don't have this basic right.

In 2003, you promised to change the law and restore "successor rights" to Crown employees. You said then that public employees should have the same rights as employees in the private sector. It was true then, and it's still true now. It's time for you to keep your promise. Please make successor rights for Crown employees an immediate priority for your government.

I look forward to your speedy action on this issue.
