Free Trade with Colombia: At what cost?

Colombian social movements speak out

Four leaders of Colombian social movements representing women, Indigenous peoples, workers and faith-based communities are coming to Canada to speak out about the human rights impacts they believe will result if the recently signed Canada Colombia Free Trade Agreement is implemented. All four are also leaders of the Coalition of Social Movements (COMOSOC) representing almost two million people.

- German Casama, a leader of the National Indigenous Organization of Colombia (ONIC)
- Maria del Carmen Sanchez, National President of the Colombian health workers' union ANTHOC
- Yolanda Becerra, National Director of the Popular Women's Organization (OFP)
- Brother Omar Fernandez, Director of the Inter Franciscan Commission for Justice, Peace and Reverence for Creation.

With the participation of

- Judy Rebick, holds the CAW-Sam Gindin Chair in Social Justice and Democracy at Ryerson University
